BLESSINGS

Dr. Nandlal Jain has compiled and prepared this Jaina Glossary. This work is not only the first of its kind but it is also very useful. He has consulted and sought advice from many Jaina scholars in his adventure and has got it in print after hard labour. It is not necessary to indicate about the utility of this Glossary. However, there is ample scope for its improvement in future. I request the scholars to go through it and utilise this Glossary to make suggestions in this direction so that its shortcomings may be removed and additions may be incorporated in future edtion.

The Jain International is doing a yeomen service in publishing this Glossary. This enhances the image of both- the compiler and the institution. I hope that Jain International will keep up its tradition of involvement in excellent literary activities of this type for global promotion of Jainology. I have all my blessings to all the persons and the institution involved in the effort to catalyse their continuty in such endeavours.

PREFACE

The Jain Intenational has great pleasure in offering this publication entitled "Glossary of Jaina Terms" to the world of scholars, students and the public. Its earlier publications especially 'Religion and philosophy of the Jainas' by Shri Virchand Raghavji Gandhi during the year of Second World Parliament of Religions (1993) presenting his historical lectures and commemorating his brilliant appearance at the first conference in 1893 was well recieved by all sections of the readers. This has encouraged this new endeavour.

The Jain International (JAIN) was established in 1989 as a public charitable trust in India after the Toronto (Canada) Convention of Jain Associations in North America (JAINA). It has manifold objectives to serve and promote Jainism on International level. Almost all eminent Jaina Scholars and organizations are associated with the JAIN in fulfilling its objectives.

The JAIN serves Jainism and Jainologists through providing, procuring and / or publishing Jaina literature in English. It has a special objective to prepare material for the young people.'It provides and sends scholars abroad for lectures and other socio-academic purposes. It also encourages researches in different aspects of comparative Jainology.

JAIN'S first poject was to help Jaina Study Center of North Carolina, U.S.A. This involved reprinting of five Jain Primary Canons (Agamas) in Gujarati. It has also reprinted Pt. Sukhlaji's classic book 'Jain Dharma no Pran'. It has been the main source for framing a Jaina Studies Syllabus for schools in Kenya. It has been the main agency (1990) to arrange a panel on Jainology at the ICANAS Conference in Toronto - the first during its history of one hundred years. It has partially supported Jain scholars to attend and present papers at the conferences. The JAIN has been the primary instrument in establishing the International Centre for Jaina Studies at Gujarat Vidyapith, Ahmedabad-now a deemed University which runs not only normal and correspondence courses at post-graduate level but it also encourages research too.

Besides the above literary activities, the JAIN has compiled a data base for the Jainologists. It has prepared a data base of Jainology scholars in India and abroad along with listings for worldwide institutions working in this direction.

The JAIN has been feeling the urgency for a uniform Jaina glossary for preparing the literature for the new generation. It has, therefore, undertaken this work in the first instance through a committee of prominent Jaina scholars with Dr. N.L.Jain as co-ordinator. He has worked hard on preparation of this over 3000-word glossary on scientific basis. He consulted the committee members personally to finalise it. He also has some specific points in its preparation. It is hoped that this coordinated endeavour of JAIN will prove useful to all interested in learning and authoring Jainological texts. The use of this glossary will enhance the uniformity and scientificity of literature on Jainology for popular and scholarly world.

The JAIN is highly obliged to Padmbhushana Pt. Dalsukhbhai Malavania who has been a constant encouragement to us in this project. He has been kind enough to bestow his blessings for the glossary. I am thankful to Dr. N. L. Jain and all the members of the Committee without whose co-operation, this project could not be completed. My thanks are also due to Dr. M. A. Dhaky, Dr. Sagarmal Jain, Dr. (Mrs.) Madhu Sen and Dr. A. K. Jain (of ONGC) They have personally gone through the final draft. Dr. Shekhar Chandra Jain has taken the trouble of arranging the publication process in full. The Aakruti Graphics and Madhavi Offset Pvt. Ltd. (Printers) were very helpful in bringing out the glossary in time. I along with other Trustees of JAIN are extremely thankful to all of them.

I hope this glossary will be well recieved by its users and it will serve as a harbinger of new era for future Jainological literature.

INTRODUCTION

Jainism has a potency of being a world religion. This requires a large amount and variety of Jaina literature to be published and made available for the public at large in all parts of the world. The general language of Jaina literature is Prākṛta, Sanskṛta,Apabhranśa and later other Indian languages which are confined to limited regions. However, the above objective requires that its literature should be produced and be made available in a widely used language throughout the world. Currently, English holds the ground.

There are two ways of producing Jinistic literature. The original writing is one and translations of existing texts is another. The latter has a historical importance for evaluating the history of development of thoughts and concepts. A large number of canonical and pro-canonical texts have been translated in English by the eastern and western scholars since the last quarter of the last century. Many general and popular books have also been written. All have tried to express Jaina principles and practices in a popular language as far as possible. Since then, a large amount of Jainological literature on its various aspects is coming out yearly for all levels despite the feeling of few books for the middle level. The Jainological literature in English is now increasing day-by-day.

It is agreed that Jainology is a complete system. It has its own specific terminology running into thousands of words.. Most authors have used their own English equivalents for these terms. It is found that either these terms have been transliterated as such or explained in long sentences or words or coined their own equivalents for the basic terms. Only few terms seem to be common. This has resulted in multiplicity of English equivalents for many terms. This situation does not qualify for simplicity of language for primary or general reader. Quite often, it leads to confuse the mind when one reads Jainological books by different authors. Thus, the situation seems to be colloidal with respect to the English equivalents for Jaina terms. This has been felt for long and more acutely now by the Jainas and their younger generation abroad.

The current times require uniform glossary for expression of thoughts and concepts as in the case of sciences and technology. This makes the system more commonly understandable whether one reads this or that book. This also leads to academic acceleration worldwide. Under the current state of worldwide interest in Jainology, it is, therefore, necessary to standardise as far as possible, the Jaina terms in English and reduce the variety to the minimum. This will lead all the future original and translated literature to have uniform glossary for easier communication and better understanding.

With these objectives in view and under positive opinions form the noted Jainologists, Jaina library, Seva Mandir, Digamber Jain Vidvat Parishada and other Institutions, a project was initiated by the Jaina International, Ahmedabad to prepare and publish a standard English glossary for Jaina terms of most common use containing about 3000 terms The project involved the following stages :

(i) Collection of requisite number of terms used in books/translations written by different authors in India and abroad on different aspects of Jainology

(ii) Preparation of comparative chart for the different English equivalents used by different authors for each Jainological term enlisted The terms were to be arranged in roman alphabetical order

(iii) Seeking opinions from a group of noted Jainologists about the most proper English equivalents for each term and to prepare the consolidated glossary based on these suggestions to be reviewed by a small group of experts for finalisation

Accordingly, most common terms and their equivalents were selected from more than twenty books published in India and abroad during 1918-1994 (enlisted in the end) containing their own glossaries Proper nouns were not taken into consideration in most cases. It was observed that these books contained a minimum of 100 and a maximum of 2100 terms excluding repeat terms Many new terms were then added to the list not appearing in these glossaries, and representing different aspect of Jainology like logic, mathematics and sciences.

The selection and coining of the equivalents has been made on the same principles as contained in the glossary of Scientific and Technical Terminology Commission of Govt of India It was thought proper to select a large number of equivalents out of the comparative chart and coin the new terms in the least. It was attempted to maintain the multiple meanings of many terms with reference to context and avoid new terms for internationally accepted terms like karma etc. Distinctive terms for many equivalent terms were made possible to avoid confusion (i e saṁyama, virati etc.). Phonetic and conceptual point of views were also taken into consideration. Many well known Prākṛta, Sanskṛta and English dictionaries were also consulted in this process. It is hoped that these guiding principles will lead to better popularity and usage of this glossary.

This glossary has taken the final form after the review and suggestions from Jaina scholars like Dr.M.A.Dhaky and Dr. Sagarmal

Jain of Varanasi, Prof. Dr. Madhu Sen of International Center of Jaina Studies, Gujrat Vidyapith (who has revised it many times for its improvement), Dr. Jitubhai Shah, and Dr. A.K.Jain of ONGC, Ahmedabad. It has blessings from Padmabhusana Pt. Dalsukhbhai Malvania. The current glossary is, thus, a co-ordinated effort of many noted Jaina scholars. I am sure that it will be appreciated by the scholars and future authors. They will be doing great service by using this glosary in their original books and translations for their wider readesrhip However, I will feel highly obliged if suggestions for any improvement of this golssary are recieved from its users so that they may be incorporated in future.

The Jaina terms in this glossary have not been organised as per 1989 convention of 'Guide to pronunciction' in the Readers Digest Reverse Dictionary. They have been organised somewhat non-traditionally to facilitate dicriticalisation and to simplify finding terms in romanised alphabetical order It, thus, has seperate calegories of Ā (aa), Ś (sh) and Ṣ (which is not found in English) Despite care in orderring and dicriticalising, slips may be there requiring reader's sympathies alongwith printer's devils

Despite the overall utility of the project, it has passed through rough weathers However, it is pleasing that Jain International is now finally publising it Dr Shekhar C Jain, Prof. of Hindi, C T. College. Ahmedabad and a noted socio-religious activist has been given the responsibility of materialising this project He has taken great interest in the project from the very begining. It is highly encouraging for me that this glossary is seeing the daylight through Jain International I do hope that this publication will serve as a guiding factor and will be followed in the Jainological literature of the future.

Besides thanking all the above persons I am also thankful to Janak Javeri, Kalpesh Parikh, Abhinay, Caturbhuja Sahu for computerising its first drafts which made the base for publication I must appreciate my family members who have always encouraged me to complete the project even under heavy odds.

My thanks are due to all the scholars who have helped, guided and made suggestions directly or indirectly in early completion of this project. I am also thankful to those authors who have given glossary in the end of their books which I have freely utilised in selection of terms in this glossary Lastly, I owe my thanks to the Jain International for approving my proposal and executing it through this small but important publication.

N. L. Jain
